

Homeopathy

Homeopathy is a gentle system of healing based on the principle that any substance that can cause an illness can also be a cure. Homeopathy strengthens the body's life force and reduces stress. Treatment involves giving very small doses of substances called remedies that would produce the same or similar symptoms of illness in healthy people if they were given in larger doses. Homeopathic practitioners select remedies according to a total picture of the patient, including not only symptoms but lifestyle, emotional and mental states, and other factors. Treatment in homeopathy is individualized. This system of healing is based on observing the whole person and developing a symptom picture based on mental, emotional and physical symptoms. Through homeopathy a sense of well being and balance: physical, mental and emotional can be achieved.
